Talk of the Week: Top 3 Investor Questions

Both Mainland China & HK Property performed well this week. While the strength in Mainland China Property can be attributed to policy easing (HPF & Shanghai), the more common question we heard from investors was why Hong Kong developers also rallied. Stocks aside, our conversations with investors focused a lot on The Sterling (寰景), which has just become one of the most oversubscribed residential projects in Hong Kong history. In this short report, we address the top 3 investor questions this week: (Q1) Why have HK developers done well?; (Q2) What's the hype about The Sterling?; (Q3) Should we be excited about the recent policy easing in Mainland China?

(Q1) Why have HK developers done well this week?

- HK developers have risen 7% this week (Henderson +13%, SHKP +10%), outperforming the HSI (+4%). While several overhangs (ODI control, global taxation concerns for Mainland Chinese buyers & rate uncertainties) remain in place, investors wonder why the sudden outperformance.
- We attribute the rally to 4 reasons: (1) mildly lower near-term rate hike expectations; (2) strong over-subscriptions of The Sterling (more discussion below); (3) HK secondary home price index just hit a 3-year high (Figure 1); (4) strong interim results at Henderson Land (1H26 earnings up 66% yoy; more in our report), with its share price jumping 7% post-results (HSI: +1%), have raised expectations for a results beat at SHKP (announcing on 10 September).
- We expect home prices to stay range-bound in 2H26: As mentioned in our earlier report, there have been more signs of softness in the housing market (lower secondary sales volume (Figure 2), sell-through rates turning weaker). While we do not expect a meaningful correction in the near term, we expect home prices to stay range-bound in 2H26. Year-to-date, HK home prices have grown 12.5%, and we maintain our full-year forecast of 10-15%.
- We prefer landlords over developers: In the near term, we believe the housing market is still beset by the various uncertainties mentioned above, and homebuyers' sentiment may stay conservative until there is better clarity on (1) interest rate outlook; (2) global taxation rules/execution for Mainland Chinese tax residents. We reiterate our preference for landlords over developers. Top picks: Swire Properties, Link REIT, Wharf REIC & Hongkong Land.

(Q2) What's the hype about The Sterling?

- The most over-subscribed project in HK history: The Sterling (薈璟) has received 46K subscriptions with a 256x over-subscription rate. By number of first-round subscriptions, The Sterling has now become HK's most subscribed residential project (Table 1). While this demonstrates solid homebuyer interest, we remind investors not to be overly focused on "subscriptions", because (1) the number is easily inflated as a homebuyer can submit multiple subscriptions, at no cost, using the names of different family members (e.g. Park Silicon in Ku Tong achieved a 30x over-subscription rate, but the sell-through rate ended up to be <60%); (2) the popularity is mostly due to attractive pricing (note: even when the housing market was soft in April 2025, Sierra Sea managed to achieve very strong subscriptions with 100% sell-through rates due to its low entry point and discount to secondary homes).
- Why the attractive pricing? The Sterling's 1st batch asks for an ASP of HK$17.9K psf while the 2nd batch is raised to HK$19K psf (due to higher-floor units). Compared to the nearby "West Kowloon Four Little Dragons" (西九四小龍) where secondary prices are at HK$17K psf, the asking prices are mostly on par. However, the Four Little Dragons were completed in 2003-2005, and typically primary projects can ask for a 10-30% premium. If benchmarked to Cullinan West (匯璽) (ASP: HK$23K psf), which is right atop Nam Cheong MTR station, then The Sterling is priced at a >20% discount, which looks attractive. We believe the developers (China Resources Group & China Resources Land) are conservative in the pricing of the first launch, because (1) the project comprises

2,200 units (a very large size in HK standard) and thus the developer would like to make some noise to ensure solid sell-through rates; (2) While “China Resources” (華潤) is a very strong brand in Mainland China, its track record in Hong Kong’s housing market is very limited; (3) the off-plan period is long (27 months) as the expected completion date of Phase 1 is November 2028.

- After taking a closer look, a discount is warranted, especially if compared to Cullinan West: While the pricing is indeed not aggressive (pricing of many recent launches is rather ambitious), directly comparing The Sterling to Cullinan West is also not 100% apple-to-apples, because (1) The Sterling is not located right atop any MTR station (the walk to either Nam Cheong or Lai Chi Kok MTR station is ~10 minutes); (2) more units of Cullinan West can enjoy wider sea views; (3) Cullinan West enjoys brand premium as it is under SHKP’s well-known luxury brand “Cullinan”.
- Is The Sterling making a profit? The Sterling is a redevelopment project (originally an industrial building). CR Group/CR Land respectively own 55%/45%. In 2023, the developers paid a land premium of HK$13.7 billion (HK$8.7K psf), and we estimate a total development cost of HK$17K psf on saleable area. At the current ASP, we expect a 5-10% gross margin. However, we expect the developers will subsequently raise the prices (HK$21-22K), then the margin may improve to ~20%.

(Q3) Should we be excited about the recent policy easing in China Property?

- Two new policy moves over the past week: After a curious share price rally on 12 August (6% outperformance vs. the HSI), over the past week Shanghai announced a new round of policy support (following Beijing) (more detail in our full report), while the State Council confirmed an easing in the scope of eligible uses of the housing provident fund (HPF) (full report).
- Do they matter? In short, we think the impact would be marginal. For Shanghai, the easing measures do not even include relaxing home purchase restrictions, and we believe the cash subsidies (Rmb80K max.) may not move the needle. As for the HPF easing, we believe the policy objective is more to boost consumption, rather than the housing market, although directionally we believe property managers, rental apartment operators & shopping malls will benefit (though just modestly) due to slightly better cash flows for households. For both policies, we would not describe them as game changers.
- But are investors excited about them? We do not think investors think these two policy moves are very meaningful either. However, for the HPF easing, some investors wonder if this may eventually lead to lower HPF mortgage rates (now 2.6%) as the State Council now makes the call. This indeed leaves some room for imagination, as the recent secondary home price stabilization in Shanghai is partially fueled by some smaller & old units where the rental yields (>3%) are higher than the HPF mortgage rates (2.6%). Moreover, some investors are also wondering (without high conviction though) whether there will be additional policy support before the National Day in October, because (1) consumption is weak & thus stabilizing home prices may be part of the stimulus package (if any); (2) the government may want data to look stable in “Golden September, Silver October”. While we would not say most investors have high conviction, a minority are exploring the possibility. In fact, over the past 1-2 years, the sector has tended to rally before each high-level government meeting (e.g. Politburo) or potential policy windows (e.g. before National Day in October). While most investors did not have high hopes, we’d describe the rallies as more of a “just in case” nature, as previously some policy easing was announced at unexpected timing (e.g. the call for “stopping the decline” in September 2024).

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
